Glenn, we received the below response on your latest manuscript, however, we did not see a copy of the actual manuscript. The attachment included only the pages where issues remain or where you propose alternative text. We need the actual manuscript showing the changes. Let me know if I missed something.

Thanks, (b)(3) CIAAct

Thank you for your help on the phone today, and last week, and thanks by extension to your colleagues, too. I have made the changes we discussed [redacted] to the best of my ability. I think those two points should now pose no problem. I have also written several of the other outstanding sections, [redacted] with your guidance in mind. I have written them now so that [redacted]

I believe my responses to the outstanding redaction sections should be straightforward and pose no significant issues for you. I have accepted almost all of your redactions, and propose what I hope is uncontroversial language for those where I try to re-write the redacted sections. Almost all consist of a [redacted] My ob(b)(3) NatSecAct mentioned on the phone, is to find text you accept, to be done now. I am determined not to have this (b)(5) her round. I want to find text you accept and be done.

Attached is the revised manuscript Victims of Delusion. I hope that you will agree that it is all straightforward and acceptable. That has been my goal. I hope, too, that you can turn it around quickly, as I really must finish this, so that we all can move on to the next issues in our respective lives.

Many thanks for your help. I look forward to your prompt response—and to being done. I hope that we will be able to resolve any outstanding points on the phone, in a short conversation or two. There is so little remaining now.

Sincerely,

Glenn Carle

P.S. I attach also a list of every page where a redaction response occurs. There are no others.

I called both numbers I have [redacted] I left a voicemail for you.

There are perhaps [redacted], I would like to discuss. The two I mentioned on 1 [redacted] (b)(3) NatSecAct either accepted as you propose, or written [redacted] The text is essentially done.

I am very anxious to finish this today, if possible. I want to discuss with you the passages I note above, so that I can write revised text in a way that meets your concerns, and retains the general points I wish to make. I can do this more quickly and successfully if we can speak. But, I really would hope to resolve the points today.

I want to send you my revised script today or over the weekend. We have reached agreement on the entire text now, except for the few, routine (I believe) additions/revisions I have made to the text, based on your last version sent to me.

I look forward to speaking.

Sincerely,

Glenn Carle
